For V-Day, I need some forget me nots

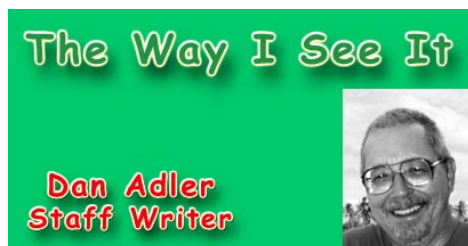

Valentine's Day — Oh joy. Another day I can get myself in trouble without even trying.

Like the Valentine's Day I ordered flowers from Hawaii and picked them up at Macy's West. They looked a little funny, but I know nada about flowers except to stay away from them because bees hang out there and a bee sting is no fun.

So anyway, I picked up the flowers and headed home secure in the knowledge that I done elegant and my sweetie will be pleased. I walked in the door with a flourish and handed them to her. She looked at the flowers and got a look on her face which I instantly recognized as one of her "you're in trouble looks." She says "These are dead. You're giving me dead flowers?"

I tell her that "hey, I didn't see any space on the order form for dead flowers." I ordered red or pink roses or one of those. I didn't order crinkled, brownish looking flowers, but that's what we got — $50 worth of dead roses. "Happy Valentine's Day."

The next year, against my better judgement, I ordered flowers again. I picked them up, took them home, didn't waste any time and said "Here's your dead flowers." $50 worth of dead flowers. "Happy Valentine's Day."

But nothing will ever equal my first wedding anniversary for getting in trouble potential.

I was working at an automobile dealer service department in Florida. It had been a usual, long 12-hour day. Hot, sweaty and customers calling me everything but a child of God. I even had a couple threaten to shoot me. There weres time I could have said "Please, do it!" But I had a little wife at home to live for ... a little wife at home to live for?

I turned to a co-worker and asked with more than a touch of panic, "What day is it?" He said it's the 19th.

I moaned "I'm a dead man!"

Why he asked.

"It's my anniversary and I forgot it until just this moment," I said. I was wondering how much pain there would be and for how long it would be inflicted when my buddy said, "Not to worry. I've been through this for 10 years. I know just what to do."

We left work and the first place we stopped was a little flower stand that was just closing up. My buddy said, "I know exactly what times this place is open. It's saved my neck more than once."

So I bought some nice flowers (these were alive), and we drove on to our next stop which was a supermarket that had a greeting card section. We ran in, and I got a nice anniversary card relying on my friend's recommendation.

"I bought this same one last year," he said. "Got me out of that jam I'll tell you."

Then again following his advice, we went to the candy section and looked for some wrapped up candy packages. "See," he said. "Looks like you wrapped it yourself."

I have to admit, the guy was a genius.

As we drove to my house, he said, "The only other chance you would have had is if she forgot about it too, and they're ain't a woman in the world whose gonna' do that."

We pulled up to my house, I thanked him profusely, got out and went inside.

I had my candy, card and flowers all ready to go. I walked through the house, found her in the kitchen and handed her all the stuff. She looked at me and asked, "What are these for?"

I stood there for a second before I realized what a golden opportunity I had here. It was every man's dream. Something to hold over a wife's head every time she got snooty.

She had forgotten our anniversary.

I held up my head, got my most "I'm hurt" voice and said as haughty as I could "It's our anniversary."

Ah yes, what a day that was. For 32 years I've been able to hold it over her head. When she says "That was a long time ago," I say, "No statute of limitations on this one baby."

But you better know I never forget an anniversary, a birthday, or what was that other one again?

Happy Valentine's Day everybody.

VITA offers a hand on taxes

From Command Judge Advocate's Office USAKA hosted a Volunteer Income Tax Assistor Return Preparation Class on Kwajalein between Feb. 4-6. The VITA volunteers have completed their training and will be available to assist Kwajalein Residents. Contact them with your tax questions. In order to facilitate a successful VITA effort, observe the following:

1. Schedule an appointment in advance with your company's VITA volunteer.
2. Bring the essential documents to the appointment. These include:
 - A copy of last year's tax returns.
 - W-2 forms from all employers.
 - 1099 forms for interest, dividends, unemployment compensation and Social Security payments.
 - 1098 forms for mortgage interest.
 - A check or bank statement as proof of bank routing and account numbers, if you wish direct deposit of your refund.
 - Verification of Social Security numbers for all dependents.
 - A copy of any agreement or court order providing alimony.
 - A copy of any agreement or court order transferring a child's exemption.
 - Year-end account statement for mutual funds.
 - Those with rental income must bring all prior returns with rental income for depreciation purposes, mortgage interest statement and a list of all expenses related to the rental property.
3. Some complex returns, as well as those involving business income, are beyond the scope of the VITA program. Taxpayers with those issues will have to contact a commercial tax agent.
4. VITA volunteers are just that, volunteers. Help them help you. The volunteers are:

Pentagon nixes Internet voting

By Jim Garamone
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — The Defense Department is deep-sixing an Internet voting program over concerns about security, a Pentagon spokeswoman said.

The Federal Voting Assistance Program, which aids Americans serving overseas in the voting process, will not use the Secure Electronic Registration and Voting Experiment system in November "because of our inability to ensure the legitimacy of the votes," the spokeswoman said. Deputy Defense Secretary Paul Wolfowitz signed the memo on SERVE Jan. 30.

The cancellation follows a report by four of the 10 computer security experts asked to test the system. Those four concluded the system did not ensure the legitimacy of votes. The report they issued said there were a number of ways that computer hackers could crack into the system.

Wolfowitz said he will reconsider his decision only if researchers can prove integrity can be maintained, the spokeswoman said.

The program is not new. In the 2000 election, counties in South Carolina, Texas, Utah and Florida participated in a proof-of-concept demonstration. A total of 84 voters in 21 states and 11 countries voted in those jurisdictions. DoD had hoped to expand the program to include about 100,000 voters.

The program was open to U.S. citizens who fall under the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act.

Congress mandated the program in the fiscal 2002 National Defense Authorization Act. DoD will seek legislative relief from the project if it's needed.

Under the project, eligible voters would have been able to register and vote electronically via any Windows-based personal computer with Internet access from anywhere in world. Seven states had signed up for the project: Arkansas, Florida, Hawaii, North Carolina, South Carolina, Utah and Washington.

The decision does not end Internet voting research, the Pentagon spokeswoman said. Research will continue.

Overseas voters can still vote by regular paper ballots, or via fax. The Federal Voting Assistance Program has more information on its Web site, and service members also can contact their unit voting assistance officers.

Ebeye residents host memorial day festivities

By Jan Waddell
Reporter

Parades, ceremonies and sport events marked a day-long celebration of the Republic of the Marshall Island's Memorial Day Monday.

Visiting dignitaries, government officials and local officials attended the ceremonies on Ebeye.

The ceremonies started with the arrival of the U.S. Ambassador to the Marshall Island, Greta Morris, USA-KA Commander Col. Jerry Brown, Rongelap Sen. Abacca Anjain Madison and Minister in assistance to the President Witten Philipppo, who represented RMI President Kessai Note.

They arrived to greetings from the Kwajalein High School band, the Marshall Islands National Police and the Marshall Island Police color guard, Sen. and Iroij Michael Kabua, Kwajalein Sen. Justin deBrum and Sen. Jeban Riklon.

Residents of Ebeye lined the street from the docks to the nearby container yard to greet the honored guests while Marshallese women lined the entrance into the yard and presented the guests with wuts and leis.

The color guard and other members of the national and local police department then, carrying the U.S., RMI and Kwajalein Atoll flags, led the parade of the high school band, floats and Ebeye school children.

Several of the floats represented the battle for Kwajalein Atoll and showed a victory for the Marshallese people and U.S. troops. Some of the Ebeye school children dressed up in American and Japanese uniforms and held mock battles on some of the floats, including a mock dog fight between Japanese Zeros and American fighter planes.

After the parade the Rev. Lawson Matauto from the Kwajalein Atoll United Church of Christ gave the opening prayer, the police raised the RMI flag, followed by the U.S. flag and finally the Kwajalein Atoll flag.

Eddie Enos played the RMI national anthem. The Kwajalein High School band played "The Star Spangled Banner," and the Good News Choir from Ebeye sang the Kwajalein Atoll anthem.

Morris spoke to the people of Ebeye telling them it was an honor and a privilege to attend the Memorial Day celebration on Ebeye, and thanked them for their warm welcome.

She went on to describe the event as a celebration of the close relationship between the Marshall Island and the United States.

"The U.S. is committed to defend the Marshall Islands," Morris added.

She said major goals include helping the Marshallese develop a vibrant economy and keeping the relationship strong.

"The Marshall Islands have been one of the strongest supporters in the war against terrorism," Morris added. "The U.S. is eager to continue and strengthen the ties with the Marshall Islands."

The senators each gave a short speech and Kwajalein Atoll's Mayor Johnny Lemari made the closing remarks.

The Rev. Kauru Kaious of the Kwajalein Atoll Assembly of God

Church gave a closing benediction.

The afternoon activities consisted of different events for the school children and a fishing tournament. The evening was filled with the Goodwill basketball and volleyball games.

The Goodwill tournament started Feb. 3 with six school-age basketball and volleyball teams and 15 community basketball and volleyball teams all vying to play the final game on the RMI Memorial Day.

Each team played in the single-elimination tournament throughout the week, with the top two teams from each sport and division winning the play-off spot.

"[The Goodwill games] is a get-together for liberation day," said Orlando Paul, Kwajalein high student and USAKA basketball team member.

Ebeye residents comprised the majority of the basketball teams with one other team made-up of Hawaiian college students who all-but-one were originally from Ebeye.

Ebeye students from the Kwajalein High School and the Job Corps comprised the USAKA team.

Seventh Day Adventists Church and USAKA won the play-off berth for the student basketball team and in the community division Hawaii took on Wotho for the championship.

The Seventh Day Adventist basketball team defeated USAKA, 44-43, and Hawaii downed Wotho, 53-35.

In the school division final volleyball game Queen of Peace defeated Calvary High School, and Mejatto defeated Buoj Weto in the community league.

The Kwajalein High School band greeted guests at the docks and then joined the parade.

The Marshall Islands National Police and the Marshall Island Police proudly marched at the head of the parade with flags from The Republic of the Marshall Islands, Kwajalein Atoll and the United States.

Colorful experiment brings classes together

By Jan Waddell
Reporter

Teachers used tie-dye shirts to give lessons on students reading, writing, chemistry and friendship this week.

Diane Hamill and Kristin Mullins' first grade classes took a field trip to Kwajalein High School Wednesday to team up with Brian Brewster's first- and fourth-period high school chemistry class.

This is the fourth year Brewster has had his chemistry classes teach the first grade classes to make tie-dye shirts.

"It is a fun science experiment," Brewster said.

He added it also gives the high school students a chance to become acquainted with their reading partner for a future reading program.

Currently, Brewster's classes are studying organic chemistry, and last week they made tie-dye shirts. So, this week they are teaching the first graders what they learned.

The elementary students arrived with white t-shirts and two bins of books.

After Brewster gave the 22 elementary students a brief introduction to the high school students and explained what they would do, they paired-up with one of the 26 high school students.

"Often jobs got done before I even ask, allowing me to just stand back and watch things happen," Brewster said. "Each student was looking for ways to be helpful not only to their first-grader, but to the rest of the group."

Brewster's students taught the younger students to twist and fold their shirts, depending on the design they wanted.

The shirt-bundles were then placed in a bin filled with a chemical compound which, according to Brewster, breaks down the positively charged cotton molecules and allows the negatively charged dye to penetrate the cotton fiber.

Then, during the 20-minutes the shirts had to sit in the bins, the first-graders picked out books and went to different locations around the high school campus to read to their new high school buddy.

One by one, the first-graders proudly demonstrated their reading skills, reading book after book.

"Super," said first grade student Roanna Zackhras.

She added excitedly, that Stephanie was her partner and she had just read to her.

The students then donned a protective smock and retrieved their bundled-shirts.

Next came the fun, the students squirted differently colored dye on their shirts.

The high school students had each worn their recently died shirts, so the elementary students had a variety of color-designs and patterns to choose from.

The shirts were then bagged up for the 24-hour curing process and instructions on washing and drying techniques were given to them.

According to Mullins her class loved it.

She added her students asked if they could get together again with their buddy and wear their shirts and read to them again.

"It is such an opportunity to be with high schoolers and not be afraid of them," Mullins said. "It

John Raiche, the new baker on Kwajalein, prepares 61 dozen Valentine's Day cookies for the schools.

By Jan Waddell
Reporter

From Johnston Island to Kwajalein, John Raiche adds his 20 years of expertise to the Sunrise Bakery.

For the last two years, Raiche worked on Johnston Island and served as the last baker on island before it closed.

He arrived on Kwajalein around the end of January after spending some time with his family.

Before Johnston, Raiche worked as a baker at the Killington Ski Resort in Vermont.

Raiche graduated from the Culinary Institute of Chicago in 1982 and spent most of his career baking in Vermont. His love of baking came from his grandmother who used to bake and decorate cakes, privately.

Raiche said they lived on a farm and he would get up early to help his grandfather with the milking and farm chores, but that he would escape the outdoor work to help his grandmother bake.

"I used to help her, to hide," Raiche said.

He said his strong-suit is cakes, though.

"I have three kids," he added. "I made all the cakes. It is something I enjoy doing."

Raiche said the bakery will be offering new products. They also take special orders with a two- to three-day advance notice.

Some of Raiche's handy work will be seen tomorrow with 61 dozen hand-decorated Valentine's heart cookies for the Kwajalein schools and several specialty cakes for the Valentine's Day Sunset Cruise such as Tiramisu, mango chiffon and chocolate fudge cake.

Said Raiche, "I am happy to be here."

does wonders for their self-esteem."

The first grade students returned to their classroom and the two teachers turned the tie-dye experience into a further learning experience such as writing thank you letters to the high school students, using correct grammar, punctuation and letter writing skills.

"We try to cover a lot of classroom objectives," Mullins said.

The first grade students will wear their new shirts to school tomorrow.

"Hopefully they will be ready and we can see what everybody did," Mullin said.

"This morning was a very enjoyable time for me and the kids," Brewster said. "There were some friendships made between the high school kids and the first graders. We will try to maintain that throughout the course of the year through shared reading time and letter writing."

Haole Open golfer hits hole in one

From Staff Reports

Michael J. Wiley Sr. hit his first hole-in-one shot Feb. 8 during the Haole Open.

The shot came on hole 13, a 190-yard, par 3, using a 6 iron.

"I thought it looked good," Wiley said of the shot. "We couldn't really see it. There was a glare on the green. We couldn't find it, so we assumed it rolled through the green."

Wiley said the golfers looked around the nearby rocks and bushes when Helbert Alfred asked if anyone had looked in the hole.

"He did the two-finger thing and pulled it out," Wiley said. "It was complete exhilaration from about to take an 'X' on the hole to a '1.'"

The last hole-in-one was reportedly hit last year.

Wiley said the shot carried him through the rest of the game.

"You don't really stress about the rest of the holes," he said.

Joining Wiley and Alfred for the shot were Jim Mack, Roy Carle and Kim Parker.

Relay for Life group looks for new leadership

By Jim Bennett
Editor

When Julie Balter PCSes, she'd like to leave a little something behind in the form of a fund-raiser that generates thousands of dollars for cancer research.

Balter returns to her home in Oregon in April, and steps down as not only the supervisor at the Hobby Shop, but also as the chairperson of the Kwajalein Relay for Life committee, which supports the American Cancer Society.

"All you really need is a desire, have a passion for it," Balter said of the chairmanship.

Like so many involved in the program, Balter drew from personal experience. Her grandmother suffered from cervical and breast cancers, but lived to 94, when colon cancer claimed her life.

Also, a lymphoma claimed the life of Tammy Mayberry, Balter's locker partner in high school, when the two women were both 17 and seniors.

"She was beautiful," Balter said. "Cancer is one of those diseases that does not discriminate. It doesn't care how old you are, what color you are or what religion you are. It will take you."

Cancer survivors led the first lap of the Relay for Life held over President's Day Weekend in 2002. The Relay drew more than 300 residents and raised $25,000. The planning committee is seeking a new chairman to head up organizing for a follow-up relay.

Two years ago, stories like those of Balter's grandmother and Mayberry, abounded as more than $25,000 for cancer research during a Relay for Life. Held over President's Day holiday weekend, the carnival-like event attracted 15 teams that camped out for a night on the softball fields and around the Richardson Theater. In the lighter moments, local musicians entertained and teammates socialized and played games. During more serious moments, participants lit candles for friends and family lost to cancer.

At the center of the event, however, teams kept a member hiking, biking, roller blading or otherwise making their way around the circular loop in laps for 12 consecutive hours, beginning at 7 p.m., and running overnight.

"It was a lot of fun," Balter said. "Staying up all night, it was a riot."

The $25,000 raised in donations and pledges also set a standard, she added.

Relay for Life events in U.S. communities and in seven other countries raised more than $200 million in 2001.

Now, with Balter departing, she hopes a new chairperson will step in and give new life to the once successful event. The group has a budget for preparations and existing sub-committees, just no leader, she said.

To find out how you can get involved, contact Balter at 53342.

Members of the Guy and Dolls team relax between laps on the tracks. Ten out of 15 teams camped out overnight.
